

1. You're in a crowded store, you're in a hurry, and you're almost to the checkout line. An older lady in front of you drops several small items she was going to purchase.
2. It's time to write out invitations to your birthday party. You are excited about having your regular group over—the kids you've been friends with since kindergarten. There's a new kid in the class who seems lonely, but doesn't have many friends.
3. Your mother gives you seven dollars to buy snacks. You can get enough snacks for a week with five dollars, but you thought you might like a few extra things. Then your friend tells you about a donation drive for a family whose home was destroyed in a fire.
4. Your family is about to leave on a long car trip, and your dad thinks it's important to clean the car before starting out. Normally, Dad's the one who washes and vacuums the car, but he has a horrible stomachache.
5. Your little brother had a really rough day at school, but shooting hoops always makes him feel better. You promise to play one-on-one with him. Just when you get to the basketball hoop, a friend your own age shows up and asks to play one-on-one with you.
6. Mom told you last week, "It makes such a difference to Grandma when you go to visit her in the nursing home." You promise to visit her on Sunday after church. Then a friend asks if you can go to the movies on Sunday afternoon.
7. You're at the dinner table with your cousins, who don't go to church. There's only one piece of your favorite food left, and you're about to take it. Then you see your cousin eyeing it, too.
8. It's the end of your little sister's second birthday party, and your mother is trying to clean up the cake and ice cream that the toddlers smeared everywhere. She looks exhausted.
